Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:

Rain in many areas, sometimes heavy in west, some eastern areas staying dry with warm, bright spells likely especially in southeast. Clearer, cooler in much of the north and west later, showers in northwest. Windy. Overnight rain persisting in south, gradually spreading into central areas. Elsewhere, dry with clear spells allowing local ground frost and fog patches towards the north.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

A dry start in the north Monday. Rain, heavy at times, in central and southern areas clearing gradually eastwards. Clearer, brighter conditions following with showers, some heavy, mainly in west. Variable cloud, sunny spells but some showers in north Tuesday.
