

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 02 Sep 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early fog patches will quickly clear, then northern and western areas will remain mainly dry with warm sunny spells. The best of this sunshine will be in the morning, with cloud tending to build through the afternoon. It will be generally cloudier throughout the day in parts of eastern and central England, with the odd shower possible.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

A good deal of dry weather around on both Wednesday and Thursday, with variable amounts of cloud and some bright or sunny spells. Feeling warm in the sunshine. A few spots of light rain or drizzle are possible at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.