

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 10 Sep 2009

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
The weather will be largely dry today, with plenty of sunshine for most parts of the United Kingdom. The main exception to this will be northern and western Scotland, where scattered showers are likely to persist throughout the day. It remains dry and clear overnight tonight. It will be breezy in the south, especially on English Channel coasts.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

The weather remains settled on Friday and Saturday, with further sunny periods for most parts and only northern areas of Scotland affected by rain as it remains dry elsewhere. It may become cloudier in some parts of South East England on Friday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2009. Published by the Met Office.