

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 21 May 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Unsettled and breezy with outbreaks of rain edging eastwards. However, brighter conditions with heavy showers will follow this rain into north-western parts, whilst the far southeast will see brighter, warmer conditions for a time before rain, perhaps thundery, arrives later and lingers here overnight. Elsewhere, it'll be a largely dry night with clear spells, although showers will affect western parts.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

After the overnight rain clears the southeast, Sunday will be a much brighter day with sunny periods. However, there will be showers, some heavy with local hail and thunder. Similar weather conditions on Monday with sunny spells and scattered showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.