Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:

A fine and dry day for most of the UK with sunny spells and only a few isolated showers. It will feel warm with light winds. Clouding over in southwest England later with some rain possible. Cloud and rain possibly moving further east along the south coast of England overnight. Elsewhere, cool and dry with isolated mist or fog patches.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Rain clearing southern England during Tuesday morning, otherwise, fine and dry with sunny spells for most areas, although isolated showers are still likely. Remaining generally dry with sunny spells and isolated showers Wednesday. Warm or very warm in the south.
