++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Heavy rain the the far north will slowly clear. Elsewhere, it will be a day of sunny spells and further scattered heavy, perhaps thundery showers spreading from the west. Many southeastern areas will stay dry and sunny. Overnight, showers will become lighter and confined to the north, with clear spells and light winds elsewhere.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Wednesday and Thursday will be dry and settled for most with sunny spells, the best of the sunshine in the south. It will gradually become warmer, and feel pleasant in the sunshine with light winds. Rain or showers are likely at times in the northwest though.
