

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 25 Sep 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain this morning will gradually ease through the day, whilst dense fog across Northern Ireland will be stubborn to lift this morning. It will be driest in the far east and west of Britain with sunny spells later. There's little change through the night, with drizzle easing away and some fog forming by dawn.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

A dull start on Tuesday for some with fog, low cloud and drizzle slowing lifting. Then, most areas will become dry with sunny spells and light winds. Wednesday starts fine for most, with cloud and wind increasing ahead of steady rain later in the day.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.