Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
It will be a dull start for England and Wales with occasional rain and drizzle. Brighter conditions should spread from the northwest through the day, though some southeastern parts will remain murky throughout, with perhaps the odd sharp shower. Most other places should have a fine night with fog patches in prone rural spots.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Tuesday and Wednesday are looking fairly similar, staying largely dry and warm with some sunshine once any overnight mist and fog patches clears. It will probably still be rather cloudy for some southeastern parts, with the odd shower possible here as well.
