

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 05 Sep 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
This morning there will be heavy rain across parts of Northern Ireland, Southern Scotland, England and Wales, which will clear southeastwards through the day to leave sunnier and fresher conditions following in from the northwest. Overnight, most of the UK will stay dry, and it will be chilly compared to last night.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Wednesday looks set to be a fine and dry day across most of the UK with sunny spells. However, there will be the odd shower at times across Scotland and Northern England. Thursday will be mainly dry in the southeast, but there will be heavy, blustery showers elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.