

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 03 Oct 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Fog will lift and clear through the morning to leave another fine and dry day.
It will be cooler and cloudier than previous days, particularly in the north and northwest, but some sunny spells will still break through. Mist and fog will then again form tonight under any clear spells, these more prolonged in the south.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Sunday should be a mostly fine day with further sunshine. However, winds will strengthen and outbreaks of rain will spread from the southwest overnight into Monday. The rain may then turn heavy at times as it pushes northeastwards across most parts.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.