Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
It is likely to be rather cloudy with further outbreaks of rain across northern and western parts. However some limited bright spells may form in areas sheltered from the fresh northwesterly wind. It will be less cold than recently, however it will feel chilly in the breeze, especially across Scotland and northern England.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

It is likely to be largely dry for many during Saturday and Sunday with variable amounts of cloud, however occasional showers are possible, particularly near windward coasts. Temperatures will gradually decrease and winds will ease from a brisk northwesterly to a light east to northeasterly.
