

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 29 May 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Occasionally heavy rain and gusty winds will push eastwards across southern Britain before clearing around mid-afternoon with brighter conditions, and some showers, following. Northern parts will see sunshine and heavy showers. A chilly night will follow with rural grass frost and showers continuing in the north.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Drier and brighter on Saturday with sunny spells. However, showers will affect northeastern Britain and patchy rain will arrive across southwestern parts. This rain will turn heavier and push northeast across the country overnight and into Sunday with brighter and showery conditions following later. It will also be windy on Sunday and remain cool.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.