Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
It will remain largely cloudy for most tomorrow, with outbreaks of rain through the day. This could be persistent and heavy at times, especially over northern and western parts. The best of any dry, bright weather is likely to be towards the southeast, and also in the far north of Scotland at first.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain in the northwest will gradually move south on Friday, weakening as it does so. Rain will affect western areas on Saturday, whilst it will be drier and brighter further east. It will become much milder than of late on Saturday.
