++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early rain clearing most of Scotland and Northern Ireland with showers following. Rain across much of England and Wales, becoming persistent and heavy, especially across parts of Wales and northwest England. Windy with risk of gales around some southern coasts. Rain will continue across northern England and spread into eastern Scotland overnight.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Rain, heavy at times, will continue to affect eastern and northeastern parts of the United Kingdom on Tuesday. Elsewhere, brief sunny spells and blustery showers. Feeling cool in strong winds. Briefly drier and brighter for many on Wednesday, but probably still wet and windy in the far northeast.
