++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rather cloudy with a little rain or drizzle at times across parts of the south today. Elsewhere drier with spells of sunshine developing but further cloud and rain spreading into northern Scotland later in the day and overnight. Elsewhere staying largely dry tonight, but some mist, low cloud and drizzle forming in places.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

A largely dry and fine day tomorrow for many once any early mist and low cloud clears. Wet and windy conditions though spreading into parts of Scotland and Northern Ireland, this sinking south on Tuesday but weakening as it does so, with brighter conditions following on behind.
