

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 01 Aug 2013

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Hot and sunny in southeastern parts of the UK, but wet, relatively cool and breezy for much of Scotland and Northern Ireland. Otherwise, a good deal of warm and bright weather, but mist may linger around some western coasts. Tonight, some patchy rain in the west, and chance of a few showers in the southeast later.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

A cloudy start for many on Friday, then bright and breezy with sunny spells and scattered showers. Some of the showers heavy and possibly thundery. Still warm in the east, fresher elsewhere. On Saturday, bright and breezy with scattered showers, especially towards the west.

(C) Crown Copyright 2013. Published by the Met Office.