

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 03 Jun 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Apart from a few showers in the north, it'll be a mostly fine day. Sunny spells and lighter winds than of late mean it'll feel warm out. It'll turn rather chilly under largely clear skies tonight, though cloudier conditions will spread into Northern Ireland and western Scotland later, with a little rain.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Cloud and some rain will push across northwestern parts of the UK tomorrow. Elsewhere it'll be another fine day with more sunshine and temperatures up few degrees. Further rain is likely in the north on Friday, with warm and humid conditions allowing for thundery downpours towards the southeast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.