++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Low cloud and fog dispersing this morning to give some warm sunny spells for many. Cloud and occasional rain in the northwest will move slowly eastwards into other western and some northern parts, and then continue to move southeastwards overnight, though the rain will become increasingly light and patchy.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

A fairly cloudy picture on Wednesday with some mainly light and patchy rain at times. Becoming drier, clearer and fresher from the northwest through the day, reaching northern England by evening. Bright and breezy in the north on Thursday, cloudier with some drizzle in the south.
