Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Early frost and fog will lift to leave a mostly fine start, particularly further east. However, wet and windy weather will arrive from the west, this turning to snow later in the afternoon and overnight in parts of Scotland and northern England. Another chilly night, but generally not as cold last night.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Rain clearing eastern coasts early in the morning on Wednesday. Much of the country then dry, although with showers affecting many western parts. Thursday looks to be mostly dry with sunny spells in the south-east, but with showers in the north and west. Continuing to feel quite cool.
