

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 09 Oct 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain will affect parts of southern, and especially southwestern England today. There will also be some rain in northern Scotland. It will be dry and bright elsewhere with some sunshine. Overnight, cloud and rain will become largely confined to Southwest England with it cold and clear elsewhere.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Eastern areas will have a dry, bright day on Wednesday but western areas will be cloudier with patchy light rain and drizzle. On Thursday, a band of persistent and locally heavy rain will spread east across the country, accompanied by strengthening winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.