

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 05 Jun 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
The early morning cloud along North Sea coasts will clear more readily than recently to leave many with a fine and warm day, away from the coasts. A few isolated heavy showers will develop during the afternoon across western and southern parts, but these will then ease overnight to leave many areas dry and clear.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:
Monday will start with early low cloud dispersing to give a fine and warm day. Once again heavy showers will develop in the west and south but these are likely to be more widespread on Tuesday, with a greater risk of heavy and thundery showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.