++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Showery rain will spread across southern parts through this morning. It will be a largely cloudy start elsewhere with patchy rain in places, easing to sharp showers across eastern Britain, although sunny spells will develop later from the west. Dry and clear for many overnight but it will turn wet and windy across western Scotland by dawn.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

It will be windy across northwestern Britain with heavy rain at times. Elsewhere it will be mostly dry with some warm sunshine across the southeast of England. Staying breezy and showery across the northwest on Monday but mostly dry and warm elsewhere.
