++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early mist and fog will slowly clear leaving a dry, sunny day with some patchy cloud for most. Remaining rather cloudy in the far north. The brisk easterly breeze across the far south will slowly ease, otherwise generally light winds. A chilly, clear night with mist and fog reforming. With mist and fog patches possibly more widespread in the south.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Mist and fog slowly clearing again through Friday morning to leave a dry and sunny day for most. Cloud and the odd spot of rain persists across the far north. Saturday will be similar, possibly with a little more cloud.
