

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 06 Aug 2009

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many northern and western areas will be dry with some sunshine, just a few scattered showers in the northwest, and southeast England again very warm. However, outbreaks of rain will spread across central and parts of eastern England today, becoming heavy with locally thundery this evening and overnight.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:
Many parts dry with sunny spells on Friday and Saturday, but still rather cloudy with some rain in eastern areas at first. There will be further scattered showers affecting northern and western Britain at times, but more especially Scotland and Northern Ireland.

(C) Crown Copyright 2009. Published by the Met Office.