++ Valid for broadcast at 2159

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Rain across eastern and central England will turn heavy at times through the morning, clearing easternmost parts during the early afternoon. Elsewhere it should be largely dry, with bright spells developing, although western coasts may see a few showers, particularly through the morning. Winds will be lighter than previous days.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Strong winds on Thursday, with gales in the west during the day. Rain will give heavy downpours in western areas at first, slowly moving eastwards into southeastern areas during Friday, before clearing later in the day. Bright spells and scattered showers are expected elsewhere, with lighter winds than Thursday.
