

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 05 Sep 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most parts of the country will be dry. The best of the bright or sunny spells will occur in eastern and southern parts of the UK, with thicker cloud in the northwest, bringing some rain to NW.Scotland. Tonight, exposed NW areas will see further bursts of light rain, but dry for most with the cloud breaking at times.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

On both Thursday and Friday, northwestern parts, mainly NW.Scotland are likely to see further spots of light rain. Elsewhere, a fair amount of cloud will remain but some bright spells are likely, especially in the south where it will feel quite pleasant.

(C) Crown Copyright 2007. Published by the Met Office.