++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A rather warm and cloudy day, with some bright or sunny spells towards the south and east. Showery outbreaks of rain will affect Northern Ireland and south-western parts, along with some showers across northern England and Scotland. A muggy and cloudy night to come, with further outbreaks of rain affecting all areas, but it should stay drier over south-east England.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Cloudy with outbreaks of rain on Saturday for all, with the best of the brighter drier weather in the south, with some showers here. Staying unsettled on Sunday but turning fresher as rain pushes across all areas with showers following.
