

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 06 Aug 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Much of Wales, Scotland and western and northern England will be cloudy with locally heavy and thundery rain. Elsewhere it will be brighter, although scattered heavy showers and thunderstorms will break out. Tonight there will be further outbreaks of heavy rain in many areas, although there will be some drier spells as well, particularly in Wales and southern England.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Thursday will be another unsettled day with either showers, thunderstorms or longer spells of rain, although many areas will also have some drier and brighter intervals. Friday will be a fresher day with a mixture of sunny intervals and scattered showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.