Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Outbreaks of occasionally heavy rain across much of England, Wales, and parts of southern Scotland, will gradually become confined to eastern England by the evening. However, before the rain clears away it may turn to wet snow in some places. Following on behind the rain, brighter but showery conditions will extend from the northwest.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:
Most places will be fine and dry on both Monday and Tuesday. However southeast England is likely to be rather cloudy, with some rain and strong winds possible, particularly on Monday. It is also likely to become wet and windy across northwestern parts later on Tuesday.
