++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain spreads across northern Ireland, Scotland and northern England today, with some heavy bursts, most likely over western hills. Brighter skies elsewhere, though scattered showers as well. Becoming windier too, especially in the south and west. The rain clears eastwards this evening, leaving clearer spells and showers overnight. Windy in the south though, with rain arriving towards dawn.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain sweeps across southern counties on Friday, clearing to the east by the end of the day. There will be bright spells elsewhere though, with blustery showers, heavy and thundery in places. Meanwhile, Saturday sees sunshine and showers, some heavy and blustery.
