++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Southern Britain will start grey, with occasional drizzle, hill and coastal fog. However, brighter conditions elsewhere will extend further south, with all parts seeing some afternoon sunshine. A few showers are possible across eastern Scotland, East Anglia and southern coastal counties. Dry tonight, with clear spells, but low cloud and fog patches will return to the south.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

A fine, warm day for many on Thursday, although evening thunderstorms may break out across England and Wales. Turning wet and windy across western Scotland and Northern Ireland later on Thursday, with these conditions persisting across the north on Friday.
