

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 04 Jan 2018

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain will move north-eastwards this morning, followed by gales. Most of England and Wales will be brighter but still windy by afternoon. Rain will intensify further north, though northern Scotland and later Northern Ireland will be colder with showers. Wind and rain will ease this evening except in central and southern Scotland.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:
Sunshine is expected for many on Friday but showers are likely in southwest England, south Wales, Northern Ireland and especially Scotland, where they will change increasingly to snow on hills. Saturday will be windy and colder, with rain in the south and wintry showers in the far east.

(C) Crown Copyright 2018. Published by the Met Office.