

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Saturday 10 May 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Northern Ireland and western Scotland, cloudy with rain at times, perhaps heavy and thundery later. Elsewhere, sunny periods and very warm, a risk of a few thundery showers in the north. Tonight, Showery rain for Scotland, perhaps with thunder, especially in the west, though Northern Ireland turning dry. Elsewhere, dry with patchy dawn mist.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Most places will be dry and very warm with plenty of sunshine. However, isolated thundery showers are likely on Sunday, especially in the north and west. There is an increasing risk of misty low cloud along cooler North Sea coasts on Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2008. Published by the Met Office.