++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most western areas will be sunny and very warm today, but isolated thundery showers may develop over Wales this afternoon. Eastern and northern parts will be cloudier though, and patchy cloud will spread into central areas, bringing a cooler second half of the day. Cloud will persist in some areas overnight and it will feel cooler in England and Wales.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Many areas will have a fine and dry end to the working week, with central and southern parts of the UK generally sunniest and warmest. It will be cloudier in northern areas, although still with some warm sunshine at times.
