

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 08 Aug 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Wet and windy in the far northeast of Scotland today, with gales expected here. Otherwise, fresher and mostly dry across the rest of the UK with spells of pleasant sunshine, although with occasional showers too. Winds easing in the northeast tonight, whilst any showers dying away to leave a cool and mostly dry night.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Scotland less windy than of late on Tuesday, with showers, merging into longer spells of rain later. Mostly dry elsewhere with sunny spells. Temperatures gradually rising on Wednesday with northern parts seeing a wet start as rain sinks southwards across England and Wales during the day.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.