

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 05 Aug 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Central and eastern England will have a bright start but it will be cloudier elsewhere with scattered showers. The showers will spread further east by the middle of the day, and may become heavy and thundery in Scotland and northeastern England. Most places will be dry this evening before cloud and rain spread into the west overnight.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Friday will see rain spreading to all areas from the west, with western hills and mountains possibly seeing some heavy rain for a time. Saturday will be a drier, brighter day but with a few scattered showers likely to develop at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.